

Diabetics Suffering From Numbness, Tingling, or Pain in the Feet are Needed!

The Translational Pain Research Group at the Brigham and Women's Hospital is conducting a research study to evaluate an investigational drug for treating nerve damage as a result of diabetes. Individuals between the ages of 18-75 with Diabetes who have diabetic neuropathy in the feet may be eligible. This 26 month long study requires 18 outpatient hospital visits. Each visit will last about 2 hours.

For information about this study, please contact Alana at (617) 525-PAIN (7246) or email paintrials@partners.org