

Wiese Lecture in Ethics and Medical Humanities

The Wiese Lecture was made possible by an endowed fund created by the Wiese family and friends in the 1980s in honor of Robert and Esther Wiese. The vision of this lecture fund is to sponsor and support an annual lectureship in the areas of ethics, law, literature and social sciences related to medicine. In the years since its inauguration, the Wiese Lecture has brought many prominent and influential speakers to the Brigham.

On May 2, Mildred Z. Solomon, EdD, president of The Hastings Center and professor at Harvard Medical School, delivered the 2019 Wiese Lecture: “Responsible Science Amidst Civic Discord: Can Bioethics Help?” Her talk focused on the need to examine values and engage the public in the governance of new biotechnologies.

To listen to the lecture, click here: 2019 Wiese Lecture